The commission approved a bond issue of $353,000, to be applied to extensions; betterments, and improvements, but stated that action could not be taken on the request for the issuance of the remaining bonds because of lack of certain information which it wished to take into consideration, and which could not tain information which it wished to take into consideration, and which could not be obtained until the completion of the valuation of the company's properties.

In reply, the company stated that the reasons given by the commission were not sufficient or valid in law. Among the objections offered were the following.

the objections offered were the following:

"Your refueal to approve the issue of bonds disregards precedents heretofore established by you in approving the issue of bonds of other utilities operating within the District of Columbia and discriminates against this company in that respect.

FINALLY ACCEPTS $95 U. S. THRUST UPON HIM

Eli Rautio, of Ilwaco, Wash., has fi-nally accepted $95 the Government has been trying to thrust upon him for many months, and the minds of Government accountants are eased.

Some months ago Rautio was informed by the Department of Commerce that Secretary Redfield had remitted $95 of the $100 fine paid by him for violation of the navigation laws. Rautio said he had never paid the $100. He insisted upon it, Records were traced, and it was found that the $100 was paid by money order to the collector of customs at Portland Ore.

The money order came from Hwaco. The postmistress said she knew Rautio, and that he sent it. It took much proof to convince Rautio that he had. The Government has been several months straightening out its books, and getting the excess $95 marked off properly. Last fall a steamboat inspector boarded Rautio's schooner at Ilwaco. It was in good condition, but was shy a life-preserver, and had one in bad condition. A fine of $100 was assessed, and the case reported to navigation officers, and payment came in due course. Secretary Redfield, in reviewing the case, determined to make the fine only $5 for a first and minor offense, but it took a long time to convinced Rautio that he had paid the $100 and had $95 rebate.

THE GODDESS

(Continued from Yesterday.) They're going to kill me if they n," thought Tommy; and I don't want to be killed." He drew a long breath and clenched his fists.

"Don't kill him," cried Mrs. Gunsdorf suddenly, "not yet!"
"Why not yet?" growled Gunsdorf.
"Because, you fool, if you kill him here-in my room-people will think—"
"What will they think?"
"They will think—oh, don't make me say it."
Gunsdorf began to scratch the back of

"That is true," he said presently. "We had better take him away somewhere. For now we will the him. When it is dark we will take him away somewhere in a carriage. We will take with us also a stick of lynamite. A stick of dynamite with a lighted fuse makes a fine gag to go in a man's mouth. It keeps him quiet forever."

"You don't need to take him away," said Mrs. Gunsdorf; "there's a fine strong elm tree in front of the house. Take him downstairs, call in the boys, and read them the telegram he's got in and read them the telegram he's got in his inside pocket. Nobody need mention me—and the boys'll do the rest. * *

The dirty apy! Gusdorf and his three friends closed in upon Tommy from three sides. Mrs. Gunsdorf crept stealthily along the wall to take him in the rear.

Gundorf crept stealthily along the "What has he do A shiver went upon the wall to take him in the rear."

Gunsdorf crept stealthily along the wall to take him in the rear.

"Gunsdorf," said Tommy suddenly, just read that telegram. You can't hang a man on that. It's from the man who adopted me and brought me up. We differed because I am on the side of labor. He says he wants to see me on important business. That doesn't make me a spy, does it? Be reasonable."

Ordinarily, for Gunsdorf had an intelligent mind he would have placed a just value upon the telegram as evidence against Tommy. Just now his reason was blinded by jealous rage. It is doubtful if he even read the telegram. He crumpled it in his hand and thrust it into his trouser's pocket.

At that moment, seeing that the affair had passed beyond reason and de-

At that moment, seeing that the ar-fair had passed beyond reason and de-bate. Tommy stepped quickly forward and lifted Gunsdorf clean from the floor with a terrific right hand blow under the point of the chin. Swift as lightthe point of the chin. Swift as light-ning he turned and struck the nearest of Gunsdorf's friends between the eyes. This cleared the way to the door, and he sprang toward it, but only to fall heavily on his face, for Mrs. Gunsdorf had grabbed him from behind about the ankles.

A minute later they had overpowered and tied him hand and foot.

Fifteen minutes later Tommy stood on the top of a step ladder, surrounded by an enraged mob of men and women who showered vile epithets upon him. The step ladder stood immediately under the limb of a great elm tree. With this step ladder stood immediately under the limb of a great elm tree. With this limb Tommy was loosely connected by a length of quarter-inch hemp rope. Other ropes had been attached to the foot of the ladder upon which he stood, so that at a signal it could be yanked suddenly from under him.

Tommy was not frightened. He was dazed from rough handling, and some-how he couldn't believe that they really meant to hurt him. It was merely an unpleasant dream from which he would presently waken safe in bed. Then his roaming eyes met Gunsdorf's. Guns- you can surely look at me."

dorf no longer looked strong and terrible, but shrunken and puzzled. His eyes blinked with great rapidity. Presently, Tommy caught sight of Mrs. Gunsdorf. He shook his head gently at her, as much as to say, "You know you really ought not to be such a story teller!"

She covered her eyes with her hands, as if she could not bear the sight of his nildly accusing eyes. It was only very gradually that the truth dawned on him, and a great lump rose in his throat and pressed against Gunsdorf began to scratch the back of is head.

"That is true," he said presently, "We ad better take him away somewhere, now we will take him away somewhere a carriage. We will take with us a carriage. We will take with us so a stick of lynamite. Presently she seemed to be directly beneath him, looking up into his face. He smiled at her. He couldn't help it. Then she turned, her back to him, her face to the others, and she spoke in a sallent hold vers.

"What has he done?"
A shiver went up and down Tommy's spine. In the name of all that was miraculous that hallucination in white with the gallant voice was really Celestia. Yes. And there, hanging back in the crowd was Professor Stilliter with his thick glasses, and Freddie the Ferret. Freddie brandishing that big automatic which his father had forbidden him to carry. Celestia was answered with cries from here and there: "He's a traitor, a spy! He was going to betray us!" What has he done?" to betrav us!"
Gunsdorf crept toward her holding in

She stepped toward him, and he had to look her in the eyes.

"Do you believe that he is a spy?"

Gunsdorf's chin dropped upon his breast and he began to shake his head slowly from side to side. The crowd began to murmur with astonishment.

"Then why did you accuse him?"

"Then why did you accuse him?"
"I—he." mumbled Gunsdorf.
"Why, in the name of justice?" "He he is a ravisher.

"He attacked you."
"I swear it by—"
There was a battle of eyes.
"Look at me! Look at me!" exclaimed
Celestia. "If you are telling the truth

Mrs. Gunsdorf lifted her defeated eyes in one last effort. "Now tell the truth," said Celestia. Speak out, so that every one can hear

For a few moments the Gunsdorf woman was silent. Then suddenly she lifted her head defiantly and spoke in a loud

"I lied." she said. "He didn't attack "I lied," she said. "He didn't attack me. I loved him and he wouldn't look at me. I trapped him in my room, and locked the door and put the key in his pocket. Then I screamed for help. That's all. I did it because I loved him, and he wouldn't look at me, I said, he shouldn't look at any one—ever. I'd rather he'd be dead. And that's the truth and the whole truth, so help me God."

Then Gunadorf spoke

Then Gunsdorf spoke. "Cut that man loose," he said. Then he turned to his wife, and very quietly and methodically, but with all his strength, struck her on the point of the jaw, and laid her senseless at his feet. Low murmurs of approval greeted the "Celestia—," pleaded Tommy.

But she would not look at him, and her dark deep eyes began to gather eyes in the crowd, and then she began right in the middle of a speech as was her wont, and spoke to them of justice, and patience, and brotherly love, and scolded them a little for having flown

He wondered why she had been so cruel. There were two reasons. Professor Btilliter was the chief one; the extreme good looks of Mrs. Gunsdorf was the

The thought of any physical contact, however unwilling, on his part, between Tommy and Mrs. Gunsdorf had turned Celestia's not altogether celestial heart o ice in her breast.

MURDER IN 1868 BUSINESS ON CAPITAL EXCHANGE SHRINKS

Dealings Today Contrast Sharply With Volume Transacted Yesterday.

Contrasting sharply with the record volume transacted yesterday the businers on the Washington Stock Exchange today shrank to small proportions. The only trading in the bond list was confined to a block of $5,000 worth of Washington Gas 5's at 105, and the stock dealing was limited in the mafority of cases to odd-lot transactions. Capital Traction stock lacked the strength of the past few days. The only sale, consisting of eight shares. Was made at 90. The quotation figures were then lowered from 90 bid and 90½ asked to 88½ and 90, respectively.

After 5 shares of Farmers and Mechanics Bank stock had sold at 260, the bid for quotation lots was advanced from 245 to 250. Ten shares of Commercial National Bank brought 192.

While 10 shares of Washington Gas stock was traded in at 74½; an advance of ¼ of a point above the last sale price, the best bid obtainable for quotation lots was 73 as compared with 73½ yesterday. The only other sale of the day consisted of 8 shares of Washington Railway and Electric preferred stock at 83½. only sale, consisting of eight shares.

Porter Wins $1,500, Then Tries to Buy Railroad

PORTLAND, Ore., July 14 .- James J. Hill's Great Northern and Northern Paoffic railroads still remain in the hands of that and other gentlemen. This is in the face of the fact that Harry Tipton, Great Northern porter, won $1,500 in a contest. When he won the money he rushed to the offices of the companies and attempted to buy the railroads. Informed that the roads were not for sale, he told the management that he formerly was a porter, but that he had entirely too much money just now to work for the company any longer and resigned.

HERBERT H. BROWN,

The Safest Investments

Are those that do not fluctuate during dis-turbed conditions of the money or stock mar-kets. First deed of trust notes (first mort-gages), well secured on real catale in the District of Columbia, constitute "gilt-edge" investments. They do not depend upon the financial responsibility of individuals or cor-porations for their stability, and are exempt from axation as personal property. We can supply such investments in amounts from 1500 upward. Send for booklet "Concerning Loans and Invastments."

which is expected to relieve in large measure liquidation of American securities from London, the decrease in idle freight cars, and the crop prospects put traders today in a more optimistic frame of mind and stocks tended generally to higher prices.

Railroad issues showed little change, and were slightly irregular, but substantial gains were recorded in the industrial list, particularly by the "war specialties."

Directors of the Electric Boat Company, the stock of which has enjoyed a sensational advance in the past few days, today declared dividends of Sper cent on both the common and presented stock and authorized the payment of 8 per cent on the preferred stock for last year and 4 per cent on the common. This was even better than had been expected. The stock was quoted on the curb market at 180 bid and 183 asked.

General Motors established a new high record by advancing $\frac{3}{2}$ points to Mergenthaler Linotype 181 Lanston Monotype 60 asked.

General Motors established a new high record by advancing 8½ points to 187½, but sold off a point or two when trading became less active at noon. The slackness at that hour caused a general recession from the high levels of the morning. MINING STOCK. Greene-Cananea 34
